

A history of fashion in the UK

Today, we will discuss the study of fashion history, why London is one of the fashion capitals of the world, and how UK fashion has evolved over the decades.

Why study the history of fashion?

If you're interested in fashion, then learning about fashion history is indispensable. This is because fashion is constantly changing and repeating itself, and designers are able to take infinite inspiration from old collections, historic dress and even art and architecture.

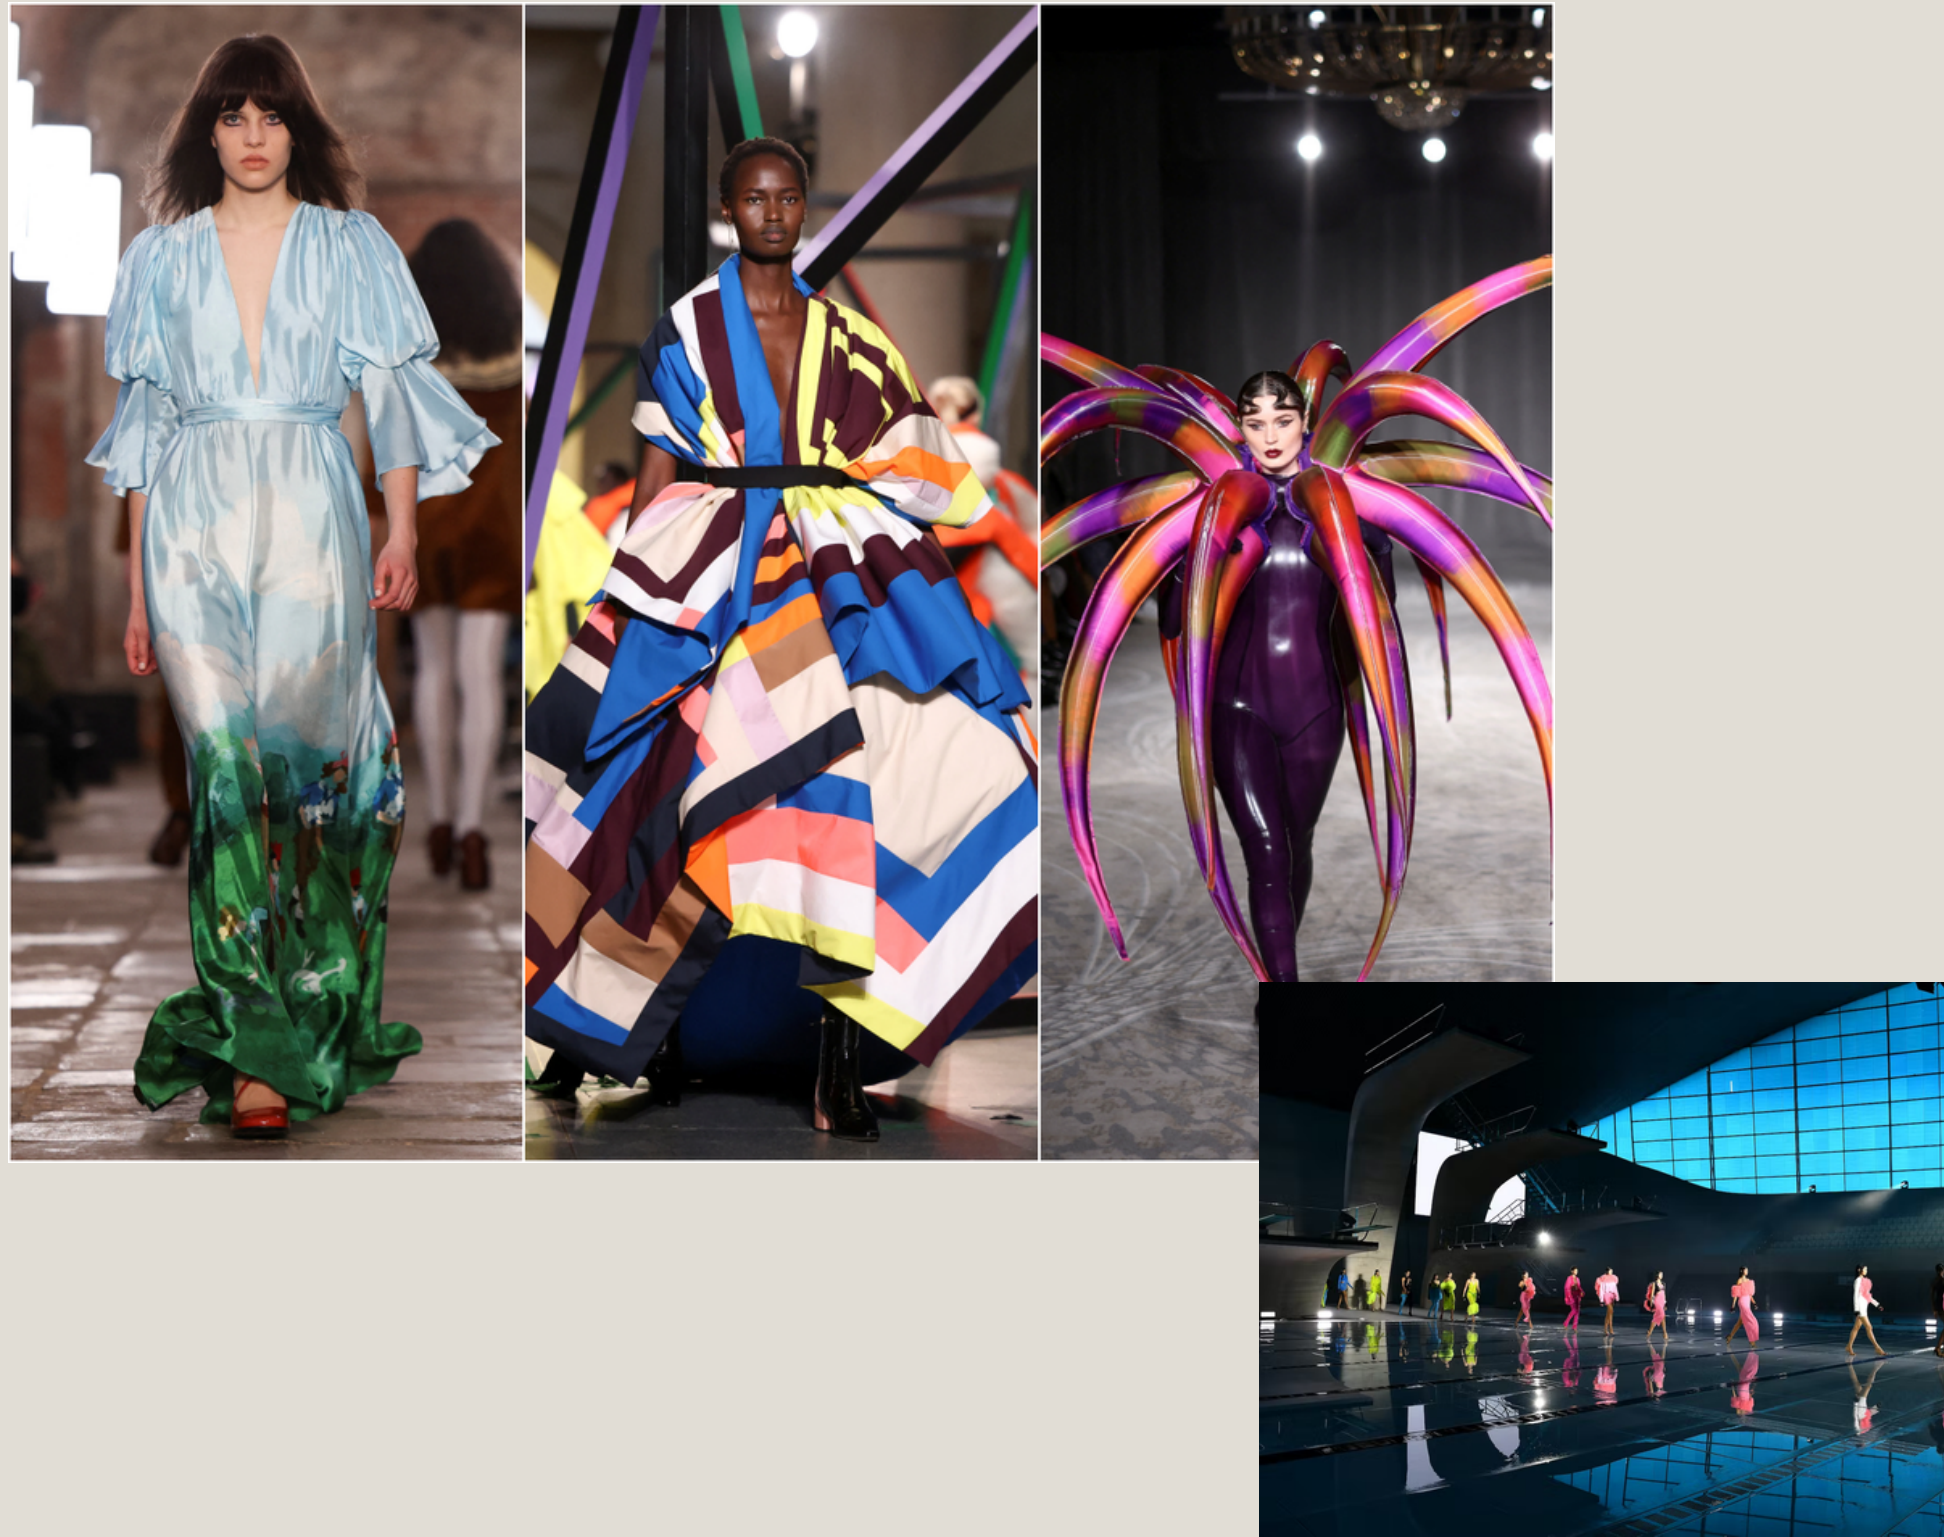

London fashion schools

One of the biggest reasons why London stands out is because it has some of the best fashion schools in the world.

Central St Martins is the university of some of the biggest designers in the world, including Alexander McQueen, John Galliano and Christopher Kane. London College of Fashion has alumni including Jimmy Choo, and Condé Nast College of Fashion and Design has sent their graduates to companies including Moschino, Dior and Vogue.

London Fashion Week (LFW)

London Fashion Week (LFW) has cemented London as one of the most influential fashion capitals in the world, alongside New York, Paris and Milan. It was established in 1984 by the British Fashion Council, and now takes place twice a year. Having such a widely respected show brings all the big names to London – designers, models and celebrities alike.
